

Minimum bathroom collection by Victor Vasilev for Falper

Dezeen staff | 1 hour ago

Dezeen Showroom: designer Victor Vasilev has designed the Minimum bathroom collection for Falper, intended to bring elegant, monolithic forms into the bathroom.

The Minimum collection features wall-mounted washbasins, freestanding shelves and cabinets, all imagined with strong forms and sharp angles.

The Minimum collection features monolithic forms

"Designing Minimum, I was inspired by the art of Donald Judd," said Vasilev. "The apparent simplicity of his work made me think about the expressive power of pure volumes, and especially about the importance of proportions and the empty spaces that define the relationships between them."

Minimum's elements are all available in various sizes and modular combinations.

Marble is one of the material options

They are made of natural materials like marble and wood, with the addition of high-performance compound materials Cementobasic and Cristalplant Biobased Active to create durable, resistant surfaces.

The Minimum collection is part of Falper's vision for the "living bathroom", which conceptualises the bathroom as an extension of the living space, where attention is paid to both functionality and aesthetics.
